Biographical Note

Odin W. Anderson (1914-2003) was associate professor of sociology at the University of Chicago with an appointment at the University's School of Business. After retiring from Chicago, Oden held a position in the sociology department at the University of Wisconsin, Madison. A Minnesota native, Anderson attended the University of Wisconsin for undergraduate studies (1937) and completed his graduate training at the University of Michigan (1948). Anderson's research was pioneering in the field of medical sociology, examining the nation's growing health services industry and its connection to the public and non-profit sectors. Before beginning his career at the University of Chicago, Anderson was the first sociologist to hold appointments in a School of Public Health and a Medical School which he did at the University of Michigan and the University of Western Ontario, respectively. In his academic work, Anderson studied topics including health service administration, insurance networks, quality of care, and efficiency in the health services sector. He also carried out comparative work between health systems in liberal democracies and historical studies of the development of healthcare systems.
